

Ph.D Program Committee

- Immediately after assignment of thesis supervisor(s) to a Ph.D student, the supervisor(s) in consultation with DPGC shall constitute a Ph.D program committee for the student [Form-2 (DPGC), appended]. The program committee shall consist of the thesis supervisor(s) and two other faculty members with general expertise in the specialization of the student.
- The program committee, once constituted, shall normally remain unchanged until the graduation of the student. Only DPGC can change the composition of the program committee due to compelling reasons.
- The DPGC will transfer its role of monitoring the course work of the student to the program committee. The program committee shall decide whether the student needs to do additional course work, i.e., in excess of the institute/departmental requirements and whether the student is ready to appear in comprehensive examination.
- The program committee shall meet with the student at least once in every semester/term in which the student is registered for thesis credits. The methodology adopted for monitoring of the progress of the student during the semester/term is left to the program committee.
- The Program Committee shall monitor the progress of the student in the Ph.D. program until the submission of his/her thesis.
- The program committee shall also serve as the peer-review group when the student applies for scholarship and academic extension
- Thesis grades of the student in each semester/term will be given by the thesis supervisor after giving due consideration to inputs of the program committee regarding the progress of the student in that semester/term.
