6. Course Description:

A) Objectives:

This course aims to understand religion as a phenomenon and the human condition that coincides with it. The student is expected to explore and gain familiarity with several concepts in religion. Concepts and terms that have been heard of in one's lived experience would be given philosophical attention in light of the debates and discussions on it in extant philosophical literature. Thereafter the student is expected to choose a concept in religion for a detailed study. As with any philosophy course, the student has to be prepared for debating difficult and even contentious ideas without being disagreeable.

B) Contents (preferably in the form of 5 to 10 broad titles):

S. No	Broad Title	Topics	No. of Lectures

C) Pre-requisites, if any (examples: a- PSO201A, or b- PSO201A or equivalent): NIL

D) Short summary for including in the Courses of Study Booklet

Religion has been a part of human life for thousands of years. Any phenomenon that possesses such antiquity and continuity with the human lived experience merits a close examination both as an exploration and even self revelation. This course aims to look at religion from a philosophical lens. The philosophical lens is characterized by the approach to understand staying clear of preconceived notions and positions. The course will start with the general issues in philosophy of religion and go on to explore Indian philosophy of religion.
